PENNSYLVANIA STONERS PLACE SIX ON 1980 ASL ALL STARS
GOLDEN GATE GALES HEAD ALL-AMERICAN STAR ROSTER

NEW YORK, N.Y. - The Pennsylvania Stoners, who captured the National Conference title while compiling the ASL's top regular season record, placed six players on the 1980 ASL All Star first and second teams, announced today by the League office. In addition, the League for the first time announced an All Star selection of player restricted to American citizens, which was headed by four players from the the expansion Golden Gate Gales.

The Stoners three first team picks were topped by goalkeeper Scott Manning, who led the ASL keepers in 1980 with a 1.01 goals against average, while playing 2233 minutes. Pennsylvania captain Jeff Tipping and George Gorleku, both defenders, were the Stoners' other first team performers, while defender Eric Smith and midfielders Adrian Brooks and Clyde Watson, a 1979 All Star, were named to the second unit.

Cleveland Cobras defender Dan Mammana was named to the first team for the fourth consecutive season, while Ramon Moraldo of the California Sunshine rounded out the All Star defense with his third consecutive selection to the ASL's elite,. Moraldo's teammate, Don Tobin, another repeater from '78 and '79, headed the midfield trio along with New York United's Fernando Clavijo and Willie Munguia of the Sacramento Spirit. The ASL's leading scorer from this season, Mal Roche (17 goals and 7 assists), was joined as a first team selection at forward by Malcolm Filby of Sacramento and Doval of New York.

New York, which placed four players on the overall selection was represented on the second team by defenders Redmond Lane and Mario Concha. Tom Reynolds of Sacramento, last year's first team All Star keeper was named to the second unit this season. Completing the second team were defender Ernesto Vallejos of the Miami Americans, outstanding rookie midfielder Walter Schlothauer of Cleveland, and forwards Carlos Volpini of Golden Gate, Charlie Greene of Miami, and Jim Rolland of California who returned to the honors list after having been an All Star selection 1976, '77, and '78.

The All-Americans All Stars included overall selections Manning, Schlothauer, Greene and Roche, with three more of Roche's Golden Gate teammates joining him on this first-ever team of premier American players. Gales' defenders Tony Hauser and Robert Steinberg, and midfielder Alex Basso were also chosen to the squad along with defender Jeff Sendobry and forward Juan Yepez of Cleveland, and defender Mark Bryant and midfielder Greg McKeown of Sacramento.

Add 1/1/1

Overall, the National Conference supplied 12 players to the ASL All Star teams, and four to the All American All Stars, while the Americans Conference took up ten spots on the combined units, while contributing seven players to the American team.
